

ODELL PLANS TO FORCE HIGGINS OUT OF RACE

Thinks Governor Will Quit if Parsons Is Beaten in New York Primaries.

That the outcome of the primaries will settle the question of which of the candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination will be successful was openly stated to-day by Lemuel Ely Quigg. In a heated denunciation of County Chairman Herbert Parsons Mr. Quigg made this significant statement:

"Every intelligent politician in our party is convinced that if the Parsons ticket is defeated in New York County Gov. Higgins will straightway announce that he does not want the nomination, and Mr. Higgins will find himself the unanimous choice of the party."

There is the Odell plan in a nutshell—to force Higgins from the field by beating Parsons at the primaries, and then to go to Mr. Higgins and tell him that a united, unanimous demand that he be the candidate exists.

Brackett Makes Objection.

But there is one man in New York who will not stand by and see this scheme go through without protest. That is Senator Edgar Brackett, of Saratoga. No shrinking violet is the Saratoga statesman. He wants the nomination for Governor, and says so.

Brackett came to town to-day, checked his valise at the Manhattan Hotel, and proclaimed his intention to make a bid for the nomination.

As to Mr. Quigg's talk about forcing Mr. Parsons it was right off the stove. Mr. Quigg takes delight in saying that he earned his money.

"I did not," he snapped, "get it from a Democratic father who got it from the Sugar Trust."

"My political principles," continued Mr. Quigg, "come with my blood and have been consistently maintained. They are not the principles of a Mugwump, pig in a Democratic environment."

"Mugwump pig" is going some. Mr. Quigg accused Mr. Parsons of buying his influence and position and said that a vote for the Parsons ticket is a vote for the renomination of Gov. Higgins, while a vote for the opposing ticket is a vote for the renomination of a stronger and better candidate than Higgins—most likely the nomination of Mr. Brackett.

What Brackett Thinks.

Senator Brackett refused to say anything about Mr. Higgins, but it is well known that he thinks he did some service in cleaning up life insurance corruption, himself in the Legislature last winter. In order to get at Senator Brackett's position he was asked:

"Are you a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor?"

"Yes, I am a candidate—a real, living, breathing candidate on my own platform," was the reply.

"There is one phase of current events," Senator Brackett continued, "that should be considered and commented upon by the people. I see that in two cases recently attempts have been made to control the political action of certain officeholders. Mr. Healey has been removed because of some scandal he has taken; and it is proposed to remove Mr. Livingston until the situation gets so hot that the attempt was abandoned."

"I find it hard to believe that Gov. Higgins gave his assent to either of those efforts. If he did he did a wrong thing. The removal of Mr. Healey—who is faithfully doing his work, because he has no chance to disagree in his political views with any one over him in authority, savors too much of autocracy to suit my notions."

"You can put it down that if I ever am Governor, no one shall ever be disturbed for finding my own political views, as long as he does his official work honestly and well."

HELD FOR WORKING THE "ROUBLE" GAME.

Victim Hoped to Purchase 4,000 of the Russian Coins, Worth $2,000, for About Half Price.

Philip Teitelbaum, forty-four years old, of No. 38 Johnson avenue, Brooklyn, was held in Jefferson Market Police Court to-day to give the police time to secure evidence against him.

He is charged by Michael Meyer, of No. 41 East Ninth street, with tampering with him out of $1,125 about the middle of August. According to Meyer, the prisoner acted in concert with Wolf Levy, now held under bail for the same alleged offense, in playing the "rouble" game on him. The two men, Meyer said, sold three Russian rubles for one dollar, and he had paid $1.20 for them. They then proposed to sell him four thousand rubles for $1,200. He declared he brought $1,125 to the Brooklyn street game, and that he had snatched from his hand by Levy and Teitelbaum. The prisoner had been introduced to him, he said, as Weiss, Teitelbaum, and there had been a racket to-day by Detective Sergeant Sullivan and Leonard while at work in the clothing shop of Goldstein & Steinberg, No. 65 University place.

Is "Prosperity" Fickle?

Now and then you meet a person who claims that Fate is against him. He NEVER finds the position he really wants. Then again, you see thousands who are not only profitably employed the year round, but who are everlastingly directing their friends to GOOD POSITIONS they have seen advertised in The World's "Help Wanted" Columns.

GIVES BLACK HAND INDUSTRY A JOLT

Fazata Forgets Rules of Game and When $500 Is Demanded Calls Police

The Black-Handing industry got an awful jolt to-day down on the east side. Antonio Fazata, who keeps the chianti cove at No. 21 Monroe street, being called upon to pass over $500 for the good of the order, violated all the traditions by calling in the cops. As a result a promising branch of the business has been dealt a staggering blow—two of its brightest minds are locked up at Police Headquarters.

For two months Fazata's morning mail has been burdened with attractive Black Hand literature. He counted that day lost whose low descending sun saw in his hands no chatty letter decorated with tasty skull and crossbones and delightful bleeding hearts in red ink with daggers pierced through them. The written instructions were the same in each instance. Fazata was to bring the money to the Kingsbridge railway station in the Bronx, where a gentlemanly agent would pass him and collect. For a while he didn't pay any attention to the letters. He gave them to his children to be cut up into paper dolls.

Then He Got Busy.

But Tuesday night there came along one which made him think. It stated that the company in charge of the mail order business was getting impatient at his tardiness, and whereas heretofore he had been content with simply promising to bring the money, now he was to bring it and cut his head off and throw it at his dead body and little things like that, they now felt constrained to sternly insist.

The letter said that, unless he remedied promptly the writer would be compelled to blow up his establishment with dynamite. Fazata was right in his mind that such a course would be a source of injury to his business, and that, furthermore, it would be pretty sure to incriminate Mrs. Fazata and the five little Fazatas who live upstairs over the saloon.

So he went over to No. 300 Mulberry and interviewed Detective-Sergeant Joe Petrovino, the Black Hand specialist. Petrovino was going to frame up a plan for trapping the collection agency at Kingsbridge, but the Black Handers saved him the trouble. Fazata was behind the bar to-day attending to the before-breakfast trade when four young men barged in. One of them, who he learned after the rail and whispered to the proprietor in Italian.

Told Him to Hurry Up.

"We have come for that $500. You hurry up or we'll lose the dynamite," they said. "We've got to get it now."

Fazata didn't score worth a cent, but he pretended to be dumb with fear. He asked the rest of the men to wait while he called his wife. He called her three times, but she didn't come. He called her again, but she didn't come. He called her a third time, but she didn't come. He called her a fourth time, but she didn't come. He called her a fifth time, but she didn't come.
